

changed expectations

Overall, people are impressed with how their employers have handled the coronavirus outbreak. But the change of routine and ongoing health concerns have caused people to reflect on what support they expect from their employer, changes they'd like to see to ways of working and what they'll be looking for in their next role.

How have employers handled the outbreak?

89% of those working from home feel supported by their employer

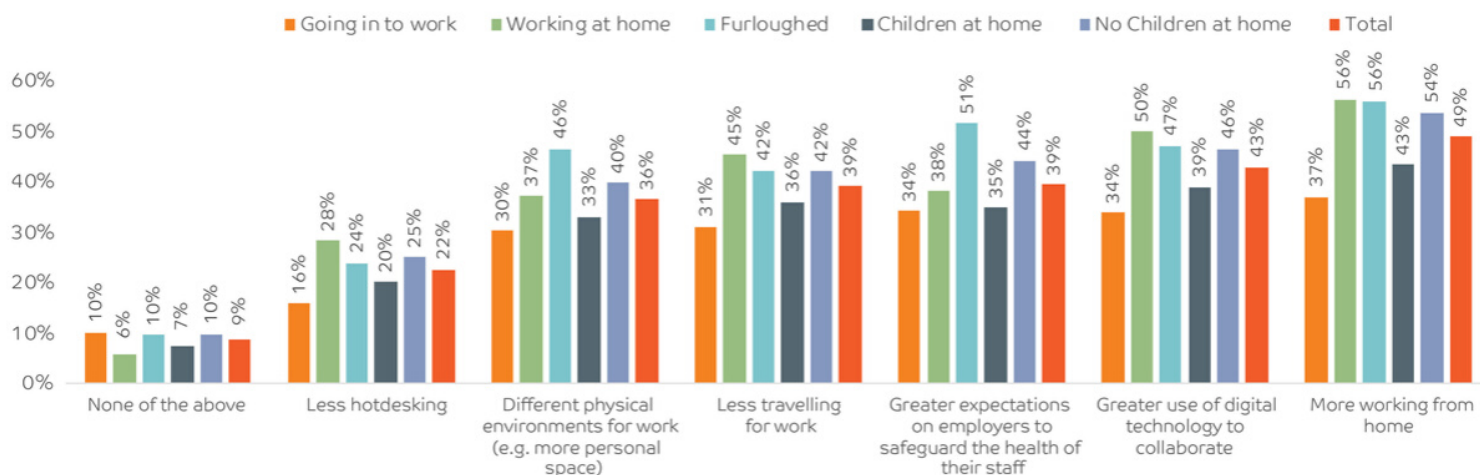

75% of furloughed employees feel supported

35% think their employer should be doing more to reassure them

30% think their employer should be doing more to ensure job security

What lasting changes are workers expecting?

Career priorities post-Covid

28% will work from home more often

27% will choose roles that give more work-life balance

20% will choose roles closer to home to cut commuting time

15% would like to try different types of work

Expected employer support

39% think there's a greater expectation to safeguard staff health

29% would like more mental health support

28% feel additional wellbeing support would be beneficial

23% want support with their physical wellbeing